Dear

STAT

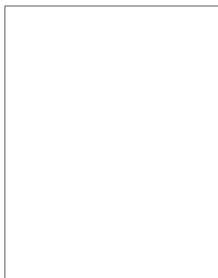

I couldn't let this opportunity go by without expressing my best wishes to you as you retire. Your many contributions to the intelligence business and the academic world will be sorely missed. Everyone is aware of the many achievements you have made in the publishing world and the significant work you have done at Brown. Along with the praise you have received over the years in this "open area" of your life should go the sincerest of thanks for the exceptional work you did here at the Central Intelligence Agency for over 18 years where you served so admirably. Your service during those years was highly commendable and helped build the "inner strength" that is now present throughout the Intelligence Community.

Our friendship spans several decades now--dating back to our days in the OSS. I am proud to count you among my personal friends and even more so to know such a fine American.

Sincerely,

William J. Casey
Director of Central Intelligence
